

Pushpa-2 scent wafts through box offices

VIVEAT SUSAN PINTO
Mumbai, December 6

HAILED AS THE new demi-god of entertainment, Allu Arjun is setting the box office ablaze with Pushpa 2: The Rule. Released on Thursday across 10,000 screens nationwide, the film is raking in massive collections across Hindi and regional markets.

While the first day saw the film earn ₹175 crore in net domestic box office collections and the second day is expected to rake in another ₹150 crore in earnings, the first weekend may see the movie cross ₹500 crore in collections across languages, exhibitors and trade analysts told FE. 2022's RRR, for the uninitiated, had achieved about ₹350 crore in its opening weekend in India, implying that Pushpa 2 may surpass this number easily, experts said.

The movie, which tells the story of a red sandalwood smuggler named Pushpa Raj, has been released in Telugu, Tamil, Kannada, Malayalam, Bengali, and Hindi. Other cast members include actors Rashmika Mandanna as Srivalli and Fahadh Faasil as Superintendent of Police Bhanwar Singh Shekhawat.

"Content and entertainment are two things that are working for the movie. We are seeing something like this after a long time following a largely weak performance from Bollywood through the year barring exceptions such as Street," says Kunal Sawhney, chief operating officer, CineLine India, which runs the Moviemax chain of cinemas across cities.

While the first instalment of Pushpa, released in December 2021, set the tone for action entertainers from the south, Sawhney says that the second instalment of the film has lived up to its hype. "I am in Delhi right now and people want to watch the film," he adds of the craze despite high ticket prices.

instance, tickets for Pushpa 2 have been prized between ₹200-900 per head, depending on the theatre, screen and timing of shows. Premium screens such as an IMAX with a recliner seat have priced tickets for the movie up to ₹2,000 per head.

The Delhi market also has similar price tags for various formats across theatres. Single-screens, on the other hand, have priced tickets at ₹60-₹300 per head depending on the timing of shows as well as the city where the movie is being screened.

Komal Nahta, a Mumbai-based film trade analyst, says that the film has been well-received both in Hindi-speaking and regional markets. On Thursday, the Hindi version of Pushpa 2 opened higher than Shahrukh Khan's Jawan at ₹72 crore. Jawan had earned ₹65 crore on its opening day last year.

Nahta says that by the end of Friday, Hindi earnings of Pushpa 2 will surpass ₹100 crore in two days, which is a good number for a film coming from the south. "In many respects, Allu Arjun is a true cross-over artist. His appeal cuts across audiences. Which is why the Hindi version is doing so well," he says.

Critics have also appreciated the film for portraying its women characters well, apart from raising the bar in terms of action entertainment and giving the male lead the leeway to appear as Goddess Kali.

ADELAIDE TEST, DAY 1

How Kohli, Gill loosened India's control

SRIRAM VEERA
Adelaide, December 6

SHUBMAN GILL WAS eating a banana when Virat Kohli walked into bat as there was a short delay with the third umpire checking the validity of the catch that dismissed KL Rahul. Soon, both would yield their wickets to mini brain-fiacs and India began to wobble on the slippery peel at Adelaide. Those two wickets meant the difference between the team taking control of the opening day's play at Adelaide, and now waiting for their bowlers to affect another jail-break.

It was an odd little innings from Virat Kohli. Australia's plan against him was simple and obvious. His response wasn't. They had two backward points and a gully for him and Scott Boland slipped a length ball wide outside off stump. He was still yet to get off the mark, it was the fourth ball he was facing, and he went chasing.

Unsurprisingly, it flew off the edge but somehow eluded both point fielders. It was a shot as if the fallow years of the recent past with that kind of line never happened. As if there weren't two backward points in place. Over the years, his philosophy for prepping for a game involved not falling prey to self-doubts. His pre-game visualisations would have him ping the gaps, not edging to the catchers. But when the run-tap turned dry, if there was one shot he had to shelve, it was that chasing down deliveries too far outside off. And he did. Perhaps, the Perth hundred had revived his confidence and wanting to impose himself against the Aussies. Maybe.

While Virat Kohli was dismissed for just 7 runs by Mitchell Starc, Shubman Gill was trapped LBW by Scott Boland when he was batting at 31 runs

Couple of deliveries later, Boland came closer to the off stump and Kohli unfurled an authoritative extra-cover drive for three runs. Beyond the boundary, in the stands, a large Indian flag fluttered. India were comfortably placed at 77 for 2 in 20 overs at that point.

Mitchell Starc's first delivery of the next over was a regulation angler from a left-armed. On a length, slipping away towards the 'keeper; a relatively no-fuss ball. But Kohli was in a mood to fuss. His intention thus far had been to strike the ball. At this moment, he was caught in two minds: to leave or to play. There wasn't width like the first Boland delivery he had gone chasing. There wasn't an incoming line like the second Boland delivery he creamed through covers. And he decided to withdraw his bat from the line, but a tad too late, and the edge was pouched by Steve Smith at second slip. Kohli had a look at the pitch, a look at his bat as he trudged back.

Six balls later, it was Gill's turn. It was a pretty full delivery from Boland, who throughout the day showed the knack of hitting the ideal line and length. There was no real venom in the ball, but the length was a bit unusual than the norm from Boland who had been generally hitting the deck.

Through his innings, Gill had applied a simple technique: A press back and across that would almost get him around the off and middle stump line; from there he would either press forward or stay there to block or punch. He had played many a sweet shot: the short-arm jab through point, the on-the-up off drive and one sweet extra-cover drive off Starc. There was also some looseness on view, especially with the attempted slice-drives through point that caught the edge but plummeted through empty space a couple of times.

He was almost on the off-stump line to this rather full ball from Boland and for some reason, he went totally across the line. He could have pinged the gaps in the V on the off, but he went for a very casual-looking flick, played all around the ball, and was trapped lbw in front of the stumps.

Even KL Rahul's dismissal before these two came against the run of play.

TikTok faces US ban after court rejects to block law

SABRINA WILLMER
December 6

TIKTOK'S CHINESE PARENT company faces a ban in the US next month if it doesn't sell the video-sharing app as a result of a federal appeals court ruling Friday. A three-judge panel in Washington unanimously upheld a new US law enacted to protect national security and user privacy, ruling that it didn't violate free speech protections under the Constitution's First Amendment. The decision leaves the Supreme Court as the company's last realistic hope for stopping the law from taking effect on January 19.

"The First Amendment exists to protect free speech in the United States," Judge Douglas Ginsburg wrote for the panel. "Here the government acted solely to protect that freedom from a foreign adversary nation and to limit that adversary's ability to gather data on people in the United States."

Although the ban kicks in the day before President-elect Donald Trump is inaugurated, his opposition to it could still complicate its enforcement. Trump spoke out against a ban as he courted younger Americans in his campaign despite trying to force its sale during his first term.

The ruling from the US Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit would make it harder for Trump to reverse the ban, according to Matthew Schettenhelm, an analyst for Bloomberg Intelligence. If the company turns to the Supreme Court, Schettenhelm said the justices are unlikely to block the law on an emergency basis.

A representative for Trump didn't immediately respond to an emailed request for comment. The Department of Justice and TikTok didn't immediately provide comment.

More than 170 million Americans use TikTok—owned by China-based ByteDance—as a source of entertainment and information or as a platform to build their businesses.
