

Powell brushes off rate-cut bets as Fed moves carefully

STEVE MATTHEWS
December 1

FEDERAL RESERVE CHAIR Jerome Powell pushed back against Wall Street's growing expectations of interest-rate cuts in the first half of 2024, saying the committee will move cautiously with borrowing costs at a 22-year high but retain the option to hike further.

"It would be premature to conclude with confidence that we have achieved a sufficiently restrictive stance, or to speculate on when policy might ease," Powell said Friday at an event in Atlanta. "We are prepared to tighten policy further if it becomes appropriate to do so."

Powell signaled that Fed officials expect to leave interest rates steady when they meet Dec. 12-13, giving themselves more time to evaluate the economy after raising rates aggressively from near zero in March 2022 to above 5% in July. A slowing US economy and fall in the inflation rate have raised expectations among investors that the central bank could begin to cut rates as soon as March.

"Having come so far so quickly, the FOMC is moving forward carefully, as the risks of under- and over-tightening are becoming more balanced," Powell said at Spelman College, a historically Black college in Atlanta.

Treasury yields and the dollar fell following Powell's comments and the S&P 500 rose, as investors focused on remarks suggesting that Powell was more dovish than he previously was, including his remark that policy is now "well into restrictive territory."

The odds of a quarter-point cut at the Federal Open Market Committee's March meeting have risen to more likely than not, with markets now fully pricing in a cut in May. Traders see more than a full point of cuts by December 2024.

Conversely, Fed officials projected rates at 5%-5.25% at the end of next year, according to their median forecast released in September — just one-quarter point lower than the current level.

"The FOMC is strongly committed to bringing inflation down to 2% over time, and to keeping policy restrictive until we are confident that inflation is on a path to that objective," Powell said.

The Fed chair did highlight recent progress, noting that over the six months ending in October, core inflation, which excludes food and energy, ran at an annual rate of 2.5%, compared to the overall goal for 2% annual gains.

"Monetary policy is thought to affect economic conditions with a lag, and the full effects of our tightening have likely not yet been felt," Powell said.

Wall Street's focus on possible near-term rate cuts was raised by comments this week by Fed Governor Christopher Waller, a leading inflation hawk, who acknowledged that the central bank would be willing to consider rate cuts if inflation continues to move lower. He cited monetary policy guidelines, including a popular one developed by Stanford University's John Taylor known as the Taylor Rule, as calling for a lower policy rate as inflation falls. —BLOOMBERG

Oil stabilises after slump on OPEC+ cuts

ROBERT HARVEY
December 1

OIL PRICES WERE stable on Friday following a 2% drop on Thursday, with the market unconvinced that the latest round of OPEC+ production cuts will be able to lift prices out of their recent slump.

Brent crude futures for February rose by 16 cents, or 0.2%, to $81.02 a barrel by 1520 GMT on their first day as the front-month contract.

US West Texas Intermediate crude futures (WTI) rose 25 cents, or 0.33%, to $76.21. OPEC+ producers agreed on Thursday to remove around 2.2 million barrels per day (bpd) of oil from the global market in the first quarter of next year, with the total including a rollover of Saudi Arabia and Russia's 1.3 million bpd of current voluntary cuts.

OPEC+, which pumps over 40% of the world's oil, is focusing on reducing output as prices have fallen from about $98 in late September amid concerns over weaker economic growth in 2024.

The market received the news with scepticism and confusion, driven by concerns about compliance given the voluntary nature of the reductions, ongoing macroeconomic headwinds, and investors' prior expectations of deeper cuts.

"Markets may have been pricing in another larger cut, and it just didn't meet those expectations," OANDA analyst Craig Erlam said. "The cuts 'will not stop a billowing cloud of confusion that is going to take the oil market weeks and months to figure out and only if the self-reporting data is indeed reliable,'" PVM analyst John Evans said.

"The only real hope for long term balance in the market is for a dramatic improvement in global economic data as we start the new year," Onyx Capital Group CEO Greg Newman said. —REUTERS

FE BUREAU
Mumbai, December 1

THE RESERVE BANK of India (RBI) and the Bank of England (BoE) on Friday signed an agreement for cooperation and exchange of information related to Clearing Corporation of India Ltd (CCIL).

The agreement will help facilitate British lenders to continue settling bond and forex trades on CCIL. The move will help Bank of England assess the CCIL's application to be recognised as a third country counterparty, essential to UK banks settle transactions through it, the RBI said in a statement on Friday.

The accord would pave the way for British banks like Bar-

RBI deputy governor T Rabi Sankar and Bank of England deputy governor for Financial Stability Sarah Breen

clays and Standard Chartered, with a significant presence in India, to continue trading in the South Asian nation using the CCIL platform. Regulated by the RBI, CCIL hosts the trading platform for government bonds and overnight indexed swaps.

"The memorandum of understanding (MoU) establishes a framework for the Bank of England (BoE) to place reliance on the RBI's regulatory and supervisory activities while safeguarding the UK's financial stability," RBI said in a statement.

"The MoU also demonstrates the importance of cross-border cooperation to facilitate international clearing activities and the BoE's commitment to deference to other regulators' regimes," it added.

The MoU was signed by RBI deputy governor T Rabi Sankar and BoE deputy governor for financial stability Sarah Breen in London.
