• TELCOS GET ANOTHER BREATHER

Govt defers testing norms deadline for 12 telecom gears

JATIN GROVER New Delhi, December 29

EVEN AS THE rules for mandatory testing and certification of telecommunication equipment (MTCTE) will largely come into effect from January I, in a relief to telcos, the government has again extended the deadline for complying with the rules for complying with the rules for 12 out of 44 key telecom gears, according to a notification by the Telecommunication Engi-

the Telecommunication Engineering Centre (TEC).

The MTCTE guidelines provide that every telecom equipment must undergo mandatory testing and certification before it is put to sale and used for network rollouts. The implementation of such regime is key to ensure that only quality and secured equipment are used in the networks.

In June when the deadline for MTCTE was extended for the second time, COAI had said that the pace of network deployment was faster than the setting up of testing labs in the country, which might thinder the network rollour process as well.

A department of telecommunications (DOT) taskforce ledby Rakesh Bhatnagar, director general of VoICE consortium, had said that postponing the implementation would not only hinder the growth of the domestic telecommunications industry but also compromise the quality and safety of the equipment being used.

According to the TEC website, there are 63 testing and certification labs designated by the organisation. Apart from TECdesignated labs, companies such as HPCI, STI, Birla Cables, have already invested in developing testing infrastructure
which can be used for the purpose of MTCTE testing.

enacted Telecommunications Act aswell, the government has said it can issue directions for
